Tomorrow (Thursday) and Following Days of the Week

We Shall Present in the Green and Mahogany Salon

Our Direct Fall Importations

and Personal Selections in

Parisian Hats, Toques, Turbans and Bonnets,

Woodward & Lothrop Creations,

Elegant Millinery Materials, Charming Novelties and Exquisite Imported Neckpieces.

THE richest, most elaborate Millinery Opening in the history of our business will begin tomorrow in our green and mahogany salon, second floor. Our millinery buyer, whose taste and judgment are relied on by the most exacting patrons, spent several weeks in Europe, selecting the new stock from the best manufacturers and celebrated milliners. The result is the most tasteful, elegant and varied collection of superb creations we have ever assembled.

Pattern Hats from the salons of the leading French Milliners are here in great splendor. Pouyaune, Tore, Felix, Camille Rogers, Valetta, Socurs, Marie Michel, Virot, Georgette and Mangin Maurice are among those who have contributed to this artistic assemblage of the beautiful.

The accepted fashions and shapes leading in the old world are not superior in ideas and plans that give the pronounced originality and refined finish so frequently remarked in the and place them equal to any of the best importations in this gathering of beauty.

Hats of velvet, beaver and felt are greatly in evidence. However, some of the very latest conceits are of tinsel, lace and like thin materials. Many of the heavier-weight hats have the brims lined with maline, which always lends a softening effect that is becoming to any one.

Ostrich feathers were never more popular or more beautiful, in tips and magnificent plumes. Wings and breasts and other feathers are extensively used.

These days there are no seasons for flowers. They are with us the year round, and they bloom abundantly on the fall and winter hats, but they are in new tints.

Ribbons of silk and velvet are conspicuous. Indeed, they are necessary on the new hats, as the high turns require graceful filling. The perfection of this is particularly noticeable in our own hats.

Several new shades are shown this season. Those most used are becoming to nearly every one, and lend a distinguished effect. Mourning millinery is especially elegant this season. Here are superb models from the celebrated French designer, Mangin Maurice.

Dress Hats and School Hats for young girls and children are in profusion. The school hats have marked durable qualities, and those for dressy occasions are dainty and charming.

An attractive feature of the present display is the varied and beautiful collection of Neck Pieces, including many novelties in this line.

This special display has been prepared with great care, and furnishes convincing evidence that the most exacting demands of the critical buyer will be fully satisfied in our splendidly equipped Millinery Salon.

A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Fall Opening

—of—

Art Pictures,
Picture Frames
and Mouldings.

ATTENTION is invited to our Picture Department, which is now one of the most interesting in the house, and contains every popular subject, copyrighted and otherwise—everything artistic that comes under the head of "Art"—pictures, oil paintings, water colors, pastels, photographs, imported prints, photogravures, etchings, passe-partouts, sepia—from the modest reproductions to the masterpieces themselves.

In the large number of pictures of all kinds, in all treatments, there may be found those suitable for Parlor, Hall, Library, Dining Room, Bed Room, Nursery, Club Room, Den, Study, Dormitory, etc.

We are also displaying our entire new line of Picture Frames and Mouldings for fall and winter, and never before have we shown such a large, complete and diversified assortment.

The stock was selected with unusual care and judgment and the variety embraces every conceivable fancy in this line—rich, odd and artistic effects.

The ever-popular Ready-made Frame is shown in every imaginable shape and design—round, oval, square, oblong—gold, silver and a unique assortment of wooden effects, in black, brown, green and natural oak and fancy colors.

Mouldings are here in over six hundred different patterns, including shades and effects to harmonize with any picture or wall surrounding.

We have on the eighth floor our Picture Frame Factory, which is one of the most complete in the country. Our mechanics are skilled workmen, who know their business, and they are supplied with all the proper facilities and up-to-date machinery, thus insuring our patrons perfect satisfaction.

We make a specialty of Regilding Frames. A postal or phone message will bring a man to estimate, free of cost.

We await your inspection of the new stock.

We have purchased several lots of pictures, which we offer at special prices.

Men's Underwear

For the First Change.

IT'S just the right time for the between-season weight underwear. The gatzky kind is a little too cool now, and it's entirely too soon to bring out the heavy winter weight.

We are showing all the desirable sorts.

At 50c. Imported Balbriggan and White Cotton Shirts and Drawers, good value.

At 75c. French Balbriggan, made of pure Egyptian yarn—a popular weight, which appeals strongly to men who cannot wear wool. Excellent value. Also white and natural gray Merino Shirts and Drawers, finer and softer than the less expensive merinos.

At $1.00. French Balbriggan, made of pure Egyptian yarn—a popular weight, which appeals strongly to men who cannot wear wool. Excellent value. Also white and natural gray Merino Shirts and Drawers, finer and softer than the less expensive merinos.

At $1.50. White, gray, steel and tan Merino Shirts and Drawers, and are very carefully selected, and are the very best value we can find for the price asked.

Men's New Union Suits.

The average man who tried to wear a Union Suit and was dissatisfied with it, and preferred the two-piece suit (that is, separate shirt and drawers), means simply this—he did not get the right kind, the right make, the right size, the right shape or the right fit. Once these requirements are properly met, the man so suited rarely, if ever, goes back to the two-piece kind. They are unquestionably the most all-round satisfactory undergarments a man can wear. We show different weights in cotton, merino and wool; different leg and body lengths to suit each measure, and can fit most men. For men of unusual size or shape we can furnish in a reasonably short time, and at small additional cost. Prices range from $1.50 up.

The "Dermophile" Underwear, for which we are the Washington agents, is among the most satisfactory we have ever offered. Made from the finest and most carefully selected Australian undyed wool, entirely free from the unpleasant sensation of harshness so frequently found in woolen goods. Those who wear the "Dermophile" will find the "Dermophile" a constant source of pleasure and comfort. Descriptive booklet for the asking.

Kneipp "Linen Mesh" Underwear being porous, it allows the speedy evaporation of perspiration, keeping the skin dry and healthy and increasing its power to resist atmospheric changes. The most sensitive skin is not irritated by contact with linen mesh, whereas wool and cotton often cause discomfort. Furthermore, linen mesh preserves the natural heat of the body, is light in weight and is a most all-round comfortable undergarment. It will not shrink in washing or wear; it never becomes hard, nor loses its porous texture. Beautifully made, all buttonholes hand made, both white and ecru color—the latter being more strongly recommended for wearing qualities.

TERMINABLE KNOWN

Agreement Between England

and Japan.

ON A COMMON BASIS

TERMINABLE RIGHTS IN EAST-ERN ASIA.

Guarantees Integrity of Chinese Empire and Placates the Open Door.

The text of the new agreement between Great Britain and Japan, which was signed by Lord Lansdowne, the British foreign secretary, and Baron Hayashi, the Japanese minister to Great Britain, on August 12, was issued by the foreign office in London last night. The momentous document is a brief one, comprising less than 800 words, including eight articles and a preamble.

Accompanying the agreement is a covering letter from Lord Lansdowne to the British ambassador at St. Petersburg and Paris, for transmission to the Russian and French governments, respectively, in which the foreign secretary cautiously reviews the agreement and carefully points out that the new defensive alliance is not intended as a menace, but rather as a guarantee of peace and prosperity in the far east, in which all countries may participate.

The main features of the new agreement have already been forecasted. The thirty articles of the official text, however, bring out forcefully the tremendous importance to both countries of the alliance, which practically makes Great Britain Japan and Japan Great Britain for the purposes of defense "in the regions of East Asia and India." This includes the Indian archipelago as a point at which any aggression by a foreign power will call for the assistance of both nations, much faster than the press of London, the morning papers in long, laudatory articles, welcoming the new and more extensive alliance of the two insular kingdoms, which contrast giving immediate relief from the dangerous thundercloud which for so many years has hung over the Indian frontier.

An Assurance of Peace.
Baron Hayashi, who was interviewed after the publication of the agreement, said that the new treaty forms a "positive safeguard against the renewal of disturbances in the far east. That is its object. We cannot say that a permanent peace has been secured—that is too much to be sure of, but we can say that tranquility has been assured for a long time to come. This applies not only to the British empire and Japan, but also to all powers having political or commercial interests in that part of the world; in fact, to all who have been interested in maintaining the status quo. It is not meant as a menace to any one. It has no aggressive intent, its only object being to secure the peace of the world, so far as the far east is concerned. The treaty is so clearly worded that no further comment is needed, and I am convinced that it will form, as was intended, the most powerful factor for peace, hope and confidence in the minds of both countries which will realize this and will keep to the spirit of the treaty for a very long time to come."

Sir Charles Dilke took the position that the new treaty makes no change in the pre-existing status quo, but said it was an inevitable consequence of the new conditions in the far east, and that it was certainly a stronger guarantee of the maintenance of peace than the previous alliance. He argued that Russia never really had a menace to the Indian frontier, but merely played on the susceptibilities of Great Britain, and that Russia would ever risk a quarrel with India.

Germany's Reception.
"In reality," said Sir Charles, "the countries most affected are France and Germany, because to both the new treaty secures possessions which they might have found it impossible to secure. To France the arrangement is an entirely satisfactory one. With Germany the case may be different, because it deals a blow at the aspirations which Germany is supposed to entertain with regard to the province of Shantung, and because Germany's present privileged position in Shantung may become nonexistent by reason of the treaty. Germany, however, may have some slight feeling of irritation because of the limitation thus imposed. It is only in this respect that the treaty is likely to give rise to any permanent antagonism. In all other respects it makes for peace."

While there is some criticism of the treaty in the radical newspapers, it is only halfhearted. The London press, which has been anxiously awaiting the breaking of official silence with regard to the document, heaves a sigh of relief and gives vent to hearty satisfaction the positive assurance of the future assistance of a powerful oriental ally in all matters pertaining to far eastern politics.

Preamble to Treaty.
The preamble outlining the objects of the treaty reads: "The governments of Great Britain and Japan, being desirous of replacing the agreement concluded between them January 30, 1902, by fresh stipulations, which have agreed upon the following articles, which have for their object:

"A. Consolidation and the maintenance of general peace in the regions of eastern Asia and India.
"B. The preservation of the common interests of all the powers in China by insuring the independence and integrity of the Chinese empire, and the principle of equal opportunities for the commerce and industry of all nations in China.
"C. The maintenance of the territorial rights of the high contracting parties in the regions of eastern Asia and India, and the defense of their special interests in the said regions."

The text of the treaty is as follows: "Article 1. It is agreed that whenever in the opinion either of Great Britain or Japan the rights and interests referred to in the preamble to this agreement are in jeopardy, the two governments will communicate with one another fully and frankly and will endeavor to take the measures which should be taken to safeguard those menaced rights or interests."

"Article 2. Should either of the high contracting parties be involved in war in defense of its territorial rights or special interests, the other party will at once come to the assistance of its ally, and both parties will conduct a war in common and make peace in mutual agreement with any power or powers involved in such war."

"Article 3. Japan possessing paramount political, military and economic interests in Korea, Great Britain recognizes Japan's right to take such measures as may be necessary to safeguard and advance those interests, provided the measures taken are not contrary to the principle of equal opportunities for the commerce and industry of all nations in Korea."

"Article 4. Great Britain, having a special interest in all that concerns the security of the Indian frontier, Japan recognizes the right of Great Britain to take measures in the proximity of that frontier as she may find necessary for safeguarding her Indian possessions."

No Separate Arrangement.
"Article 5. The high contracting parties agree that neither will, without consulting the other, enter into a separate arrangement with another power or powers which might be prejudicial to the interests of the objects described in the preamble."

"Article 6. As regards the present war between Japan and Russia, Great Britain will continue to maintain strict neutrality. It will not assume any power or power to join hostilities against Japan, in which case Great Britain will conduct war in common, and will make peace in mutual agreement with Japan."

"Article 7. The conditions under which armed assistance shall be afforded by either

"FURNITURE, CARPETS AND DRAPERIES."

"PAP" HILLMAN DEAD.

Venerable Colored Man the Victim of an Accident.

A colored woman called at the stable of Ernest Burdett, in the rear of 629 D street northwest, this morning to see "Pap," as Andrew Hillman, colored, was known, and was notified that he was dead. "Pap" Hillman was a nearly ninety years old, and had been employed by Mr. Burdett for nearly forty years. He was well known by people who had patronized the stable years ago, and was popular among the people in the neighborhood. A room on the second floor of the building was used as the old man's home. In this apartment he did his cooking, sleeping and mending, and the colored people in the alley looked upon him as a father.

About 11 o'clock last night he started down the rear steps with a bucket in his hand, and fell. A woman who was passing through the alley at the time was attracted to the stable by the noise, and found him lying at the foot of the steps groaning. She summoned the police, and the latter called upon the Emergency Hospital for assistance.

When the physician from the hospital reached the stable he found that life was extinct. The elderly man had sustained a severe fracture of the skull and had lived only a short time.
